

The 12th-century Muslim philosopher Al Ghazali's thought is the most misperceived. Being a theologian, he has given the logic that the Quran is open for interpretations. He referred "Drops of water in the sea" and said that the Quran is like a sea and everyone has right to have the journey of this sea to get the pearls within the depth of sea. He further asked that why one gets satisfied from the apparent and remain only the coast? He explained that it is permissible for Muslims to let go, move on and to disagree. His thoughts are perfect combination of modernism and traditionalism.
