Visiting Cherokee

The author states that he had difficulty in selecting a destination for trip so, when John suggest about Cherokee he agreed. Together they visited an Indian village in Qualla boundary that showcased lifestyle of the 18th century. After that they found themselves in a souvenir shops where different historical materials were displayed. There they met George and chatted with him about Bingo Weekends, which were the source of entertainment for people. At last they visited museum that showcased arts and symbols of different kinds. Coming back home the author exclaimed his excitedness for another trip.
