

Title:

Evils and ways of Eradication of war

The writer has narrated war as a cause of collapse of civilizations. He believes that when war becomes unbearable then one cannot get rid of it. Initially its destruction might seem to be more than its benefits, so states fought keeping an option of exemption for loser. When warring society progresses politically and economically then it uses resources in military power. However, war proves to be cancer destroying healthy tissues. In such situations in history when war has threatened civilization, states have tried to abandon it. So this gave two options: individual-oriented and state-oriented. In former individuals refuse to take part in war and in latter government of state takes stance against war and its causes. The writer believes ^{that} the second option, until now, seems more fruitful.
