

Modern inventions in Communication

Distances are often measured in miles, but they can also be measured in time. In the Past, traveling long distances used to take weeks or even months. However, with the invention of telephones, communication has become just a click away, transforming the world into a global village. Today, telephone calls travel as a beam of light through electrical signals.

Words in Passage: 156
Words in Precise: 59