

"Where are you going, Shyam?" said the teacher

"I am on my way to the Ganges," replied Shyam,

"I go there every morning to take my bath."

"Do you not get late for school?" said the teacher again. Shyam said,

"No sir, I am particular about time."

'How pretty you are?" said the fox to the crow.
"I am sure, so beautiful a bird must have a beautiful voice. I have heard much praise of your singing. "Will you not sing a few notes for me?"

① The teacher inquired Ali where he was going. Ali replied that he was on his way to Ganges and further added that he went there every morning to take his bath. Upon that, the teacher once again inquired if he didn't get ~~there~~ late for school. Ali replied in negative and added respectfully that he was particular about time.

② The fox told the crow with mockery that she ~~was~~ so was so pretty and added ironically that he was assured that a very beautiful bird must have a beautiful voice. He further added that he had heard much praise of her singing and insisted that she must sing a few notes for him.
