

After the partition of Pakistan on 24 August 1947, Pakistan faced different challenges. One of major significance challenge was that, development of constitution. It took almost 9 years (1947-1956) for the constituent Assemblies to make constitution for the country. These delays faced by Pakistan because of political intrigues and scramble for power, and more included; role of religion, nature of federal constitution, different cultures & linguistics and lack of ~~the~~ homogeneity.

First of all, most sensitive and deciding the role of Islam (religion) in country constitution. That time was claimed that, Pakistan is established because of Indian Muslims to preserve and to promote Islamic system. While there was claimed that Pakistan should be based on Islamic ideology and their principals. The constituent Assemblies takes alot of time and spent their energy in arriving at a commonly accepted concept of an Islamic state. At that time, it was big and challenging issue faced by country.

The nature of federal ~~constitution~~ structure was most complicated ~~of~~ issue of the constitution making in Pakistan. Before the creation of Bangladesh, Pakistan's location was very unique in world, consisted of west Pakistan and East Pakistan, East Pakistan separated by a thousand miles of Indian territory. Also, west Pakistan was industrially more advanced.

Thirdly, the cultural and linguistic differences was important and hurdle faced by constitution-development at that time. West Pakistan was dominated Muslims; East Pakistan had important non-Muslim ~~major~~ minorities. ~~Secondly~~ Furthermore, Urdu was a official language announced, due to this Bengali was not happy from this statement. Therefore, delay in constitution did considerable damage to the feeling of national unity.

Another problem which the framers of constitution faced was the acute lack of homogeneity not only b/w West ~~of~~ and East Pakistan, but there were deep differences among the different sections of population in West - Pakistan as well.

As a result, the framers of constitution faced different issues who delayed the making-constitution. Those problems including; different cultures and linguistics, no unity between ~~the~~ west and east Pakistan and role of Islam in constitution was considerable issues. So, that time Pakistan's two Constitutional Assemblies had address different challenges faced by constitution-making-
