

Trump's Foreign Policy, Shifting the US towards isolationism.

Indeed, Trump's foreign policy is shifting the USA towards isolationism.

Recent decisions of Trump are testament to this - He has ordered to cut off the aids which are even less than 1% of US budget. He works on protectionism and isolationism, as same was practiced by founder of Republicanism.

Mention Trump is a businessman and he prioritizes transactional relations.

Trump's policy is based on Quid Pro Quo.

It means he wants something to give in exchange of something.

He wants to grow the America solely, instead of helping other countries as well and enabling them to grow.

Moreover, he refused to give more aid to Ukraine as well. He is practicing such policy not only at international arena, but also within his own country. He has given orders to states to run their educational institutions, dual system is waste of money. Some analyst argues that Trump is taking comedy such orders as he is a popular leader.

Trump take popular decisions to make himself populist

Nancy Pelosi

There is division of opinions. However, Not comprehensive Answer Mention Trump first term approach of Isolationism
the current decisions are steering the USA towards isolationism.
Mention how Trump withdrew from Paris Agreement, Ukraine Aid and towards NATO stance.. further Trump withdrew troops and military aid.
These all arguments fall under Trump moving towards isolationism