

TITLE: Life in Temperate or Tropic Countries

The temperate regions shows promineny of cold climate. It increases the energy levels in human body without doing any physical hardwork. It helps to fight against any hurdle and increases the level of optimism too. Different climates leave different impact on humans. A man puts little effort for his survival in a moderate weather like he builds a house and purchases his clothes as per the weather. He uses trees and coal for survival purpose and also arrange some nutritious food to maintain his energy levels. However, a man in tropics can survive in open air without much need of clothes or fire. He can easily arrange his nutritious food from earth. Human nature's response greatly depends on climate ^{it is} either hot or cold.
