The Ancient Greece and Concept of Oracles

Human beings needed to communicate with divine whom they believed to be Supreme because of their weaknesses and fear facing life mysteries. They considered wishes of gods as their guide. In primitive Greece such wishes were decoded by oracles and practised by soothsayers who had understanding of god's signals that helped them in interpreting natural phenomena. They used to examine the intestines of sacrificed animals. There were many famous soothsayers because of popularity of Palmistry and dreams interpretation. They believed that those intermediates were shortly overcome by divine mania to directly speak to gods. In nutshell, it was their faith that oracles were directly associated with gods, king of gods and could see the future.
