The Dream of Equality

The author had a dream that one day, nation will ~~rise~~ came to know about actual meaning of their creation. He dreamed that a nation where ^{this sentence is too long} former slaves and slaves' owners live together, where justice replaces oppression, and children are judged by their character, not color. He also desired that ^{one day} black and white children would live like brothers live like brotherhood in the state of the US. Moreover, he dreamed that one day every valley, hill and rough places made plain, symbolizing justice and equality. With unshakable faith, he believes that America can turn despair into hope, and discord into harmony. United by faith, that people work, pray and struggle together for their freedom.
