

A TRIP TO CHEROKEE

The author wanted to visit an unusual travel destination and make a trip to Cherokee county with John. They visited the town of Qualla Boundary which showcased the life of 18th century Cherokee through centres and nightly events. Next, they made their way to a souvenir shop with all kinds of traditional ornaments and accessories. The shopkeeper invited them to lunch where he told them how Cherokee adapts during the off-peak season. One such way is hosting the "Bingo Weekends". A game event which gathers scores of people and makes great profit for them. Lastly, they visited a museum which housed various pieces of Cherokee's history. The author missed the trip and hopes to visit another uncommon spot.
