

Passage

Power, in itself, is neither good nor evil; it is a tool, and its moral quality depends on how it is used. History shows that those who sought power for service became statesmen, while those who sought it for self-glory turned into tyrants. The temptation of authority often reveals a man's true nature. When one ascends to office, he either expands in virtue or shrinks in character.

True leadership demands moral discipline as much as intellectual competence. It requires humility to listen, wisdom to decide, and courage to act justly. Yet, modern politics has reduced leadership to the art of gaining votes rather than the skill of governing wisely. Public office is treated as a prize rather than a responsibility. Thus, societies lose faith in institutions when their rulers treat power as property and not as a trust.

The reform of leadership must begin with reform of values. Education must teach the ethics of responsibility before ambition. The true test of power is not how much one controls others, but how justly one serves them.

Title : Responsibility - An Essence of True Leader

Power, fundamentally, is neither good nor bad but depends on its use. It corrupted the rulers who used it for ^{Selfishly} selfish purposes and while ^{made others respected} others are respected ^{nature} even today. Power does not change a man's nature but only brings out their ^{truth} ~~true nature~~. Moral values are essential for ^{and governing} leadership, yet politicians only confine it with vote grabbing skills and not the governing. Mistrust is sowed in ^{Public's} ~~People's~~ mind when officials use offices to ~~gain~~ serve themselves rather than the ^{their} ~~the~~ Public. Leaders must be re-taught moral values and ~~their~~ responsibilities as true leader is ^{the} ~~one~~ who serve the People, not his interests.

Power, fundamentally, is neither good nor bad but depends on its use. It corrupted those who misused it and ennobled those who used it for service. It doesn't change nature but reveals it. True morality ~~are~~ is essential for leadership, yet modern politicians prefer popularity over service. Mistrust is sowed in Public's mind when authority is used to serve self interest. Leaders must re-learn the ethics of leadership. A true leader serve his People, not himself.

تعلیم کا مقصد صرف نوکری حاصل کرنا نہیں بلکہ انسان کے اندر سوچنے اور سمجھنے کی صلاحیت پیدا کرنا ہے۔ علم انسان کو آزاد کرتا ہے اور اس کے ضمیر کو بیدار کرتا ہے۔ آج کا تعلیمی نظام نمبروں اور ڈگریوں تک محدود ہو چکا ہے۔ جب تک تعلیم انسان کو خود شناسی اور اخلاقی شعور نہ دے، وہ معاشرے کے لیے بوجھ بن جاتی ہے، سہارا نہیں۔

Translaction

Education's Purpose is not limited to getting a good job but to induce intellectual and cognitive abilities in mankind. Knowledge ~~give~~ ~~human~~ frees a man and activates his conscience. Education system today has been limited to issuing degrees and number games. Education remains a burden on society not a support unless it gives mankind ability to self reflect and ^{awakens} ~~moral~~ ^{their} conscience.