

"A Visit to Cherokee"

Author explains that during his vacation last may, he decided to have a tour to exotic place spared from the holiday tour crowds. Then he went to Cherokee and there he visited Qualla Boundary town situated between mountains giving paradise view. This town present the Cherokee past to tourists through representing tribde craft and the life style of 18 century people. The author saw shops there, filled with traditional handmade things. Then he m the middle-aged shopkeeper and his fluent English impressed the author. Then he invited the author for lunch. Man told that he works hard during four season and he is also a woodcutter. Author came to know that Cherokees don't only depend trade to survival. Another way of earning for them is "Bingo weekend". On Friday afternoons of Bingo weekends, a large hall, are open to entertain people with different games. This give them great return. The author's last stop was the Museum in Cherokee, where art objects were the symbol of Cherokee cosmology are displayed. Author missing the place after returned to home.

Total words: 550

Word Count: 190