Title : A Trip to an Exotic Town.

The writer describes his experience during his holiday trip last May to Cherokee - a county in the state of Oklahoma.

John, who suggested ~~him~~ the trip was also along, they visited a scenic mountainous town called Qualla Bandary where its Cherokee Indian village was presenting Cherokee's brief history to the tourists by tribal crafts and music. In that town, they navigated to the souvenir shops with the help of locals. These shops were stuffed with rubber axes, traditional made turkey feather war bonnets and animal skin teepees - placed near the shops. The writer and his friend John, was welcomed by a middle aged man named George who told them about the "Bingo Weekend" on which various kinds of games are played giving locals a good return during the off-peak tourism period. Before leaving they visited an art museum displaying symbols of Cherokee's cosmology, it was a trip that left a lasting impression on the writer, who hoped to explore more such exotic destinations.
