Behaviour of Men Is Shaped By Situations

The moderate climate of northern Europe gives a man to work hard and overcome obstacles. On the contrary, too cold weather leaves no hope for man to strive and work hard. Similarly, warmer climates make man too comfortable to strive for success. Weather with intermediate cold, though still uncomfortable, will still drive him to work hard to equip himself with all the necessities that will make him warmer and comfortable. People living in warmer climates do not need much for sustenance. Very little is needed and it is gotten by small work. So, the weather shapes the behaviour of man to either work hard or not.
