ESSAY

Imagine, a post circulates on social media platforms conveying that a group of people will be approaching towards village for child-kidnapping by evening. At the same time, three friends enter into the village for tourism purpose. Now think that will the residents welcome them or ~~not~~ they will turn into a mob, aiming at killing those tourists. This is how fake news and propaganda control people's actions and opinions. Today, internet users are almost everywhere in the world.

Dissemination of such disinformation bring societies on the verge of unrest, confusion, and harassment.
There are multi-pronged threats posed by systematically devised information in current age. These include undermining democratic norms, exacerbating political polarization, creating trust deficit, extremism and distorting people's dignity.
To counter these, false news and propagandas can be controlled through state-run policies, awareness of masses and promoting ethical journalism. By the virtue of the fact, false news and propagandas are two strategies to influence people's opinions, behaviours and emotions. They pose great threats to political, social, and organizational spheres of society.
These can be curtailed by social awareness and reforming mass media.
