Introduction.

"Teenage boy commits patricide", cause unknown, a news report I heard that might send chills down any sane person's spine. After thorough investigation by the police, it was found out that the young man had killed two of his brothers under the influence of ICE (crystal meth) — a powerful heavy drug ~~addiction~~ has profound effects on the brain's chemical balance. This horrifying incident vividly illustrates the grim realities of the increasing drug abuse epidemic in Pakistan.

The country is struggling with a growing drug crisis fuelled by the Afghan war, poverty and lack of education.

In addition to the relative ease of access to these drugs in university campuses and markets, peer pressure has also led to the proliferation of drug abuse among the masses, especially the youth. Drug culture has also taken off as a consequence of cultural globalization.
