For knowing our hidden faults, it is important to observe how our enemies say about us. Our friends ~~are~~ often praise us as we like. Firstly, to them ~~our~~ faults don't appear to be faults at all. Or they hold our interests so dear it is hidden so as not to upset us. Or else, they remain silent with them. Despite the fact that our enemy scrutinize us thoroughly and exposes our weaknesses from every corner, he turns a ~~minor~~ make a mountain out of molehill issue into a major one out of hostility, but there is always element of truth in it. A friend always encourages the virtues of his friend, the while an enemy highlights his faults. Therefore, we should be grateful to our enemy, as he makes us aware of our faults. In this context, the enemy proves to be better than the friend.

Common people think that the country's law and an individual's freedom are often opposite to each other. At first glance, this statement does not appear to be wrong. Every law imposes some restrictions on the other on the citizens. If the laws in a country are stricter, then the restrictions on citizens are also greater.

Excessive restrictions suppress an individual's freedom under their weight. On the contrary, if the laws are less strict, the scope of citizens' freedom is greater.
