

Sustainable Urban Planning and Human Life

Urban green spaces provide a peaceful haven from the bustling cities. These parks balance development and environmental protection by supporting a vibrant flora and also offering to host the wildlife. City parks foster community bonds among themselves through cultural events and leisure pursuits. Additionally, they enhance mental health, lessen urban heat and atmosphere quality. However, sustainable urban planning is crucial for human and environmental health. Building cities and green spaces, where human and nature can coexist, is the way forward for the green urban future.
