23. People moan about poverty as a great evil ; and it seems to be an accepted belief that if people only had plenty of money, they would be happy and useful and get more out of life. As a rule, there is more genuine satisfaction in life and more obtained from life in the humble cottage of the poor man than in the palaces of the rich. I always pity the sons and daughters of rich men, who are attended by servants, and have governesses at a later age ; at the same time I am glad to think that they do not know what they have missed.

It is because I know how sweet and happy and pure the home of honest poverty is, how free from perplexing care and from social envies and jealousies—how loving and united its members are in the common interest of supporting the family that I sympathize with the rich man's boy and congratulate the poor man's son. It is for these reasons that from the ranks of the poor so many strong, eminent, self-reliant men have always sprung and always must spring. If you will read the list of the "Immortals who were not born to die," you will find that most of them have been born poor.

It seems nowadays a matter of universal desire that poverty should be abolished. We should be quite willing to abolish luxury ; but to abolish honest, industrious, self-denying poverty would be to destroy the soil upon which mankind produces the virtues that will enable our race to reach a still higher civilization than it now possesses.

24 The first step towards the abolition of poverty is the abolition of the system of taxation as he approached

Peace and Greatness in Poverty

There is a common perception about affluency that it brings endless happiness to life. However, genuine satisfaction lies in humbleness and simplicity. The rich enjoy luxuries and lavish comfort but are often deprived of a truly happy, united and an envy-free life, that a poor person is blessed with. Therefore, most of the great souls who live forever in people's heart come from a humble background. A common aim to abolish 'poverty' instead of extravagance would destroy the very ground that produces the real humanity, and it would hinder the path towards further civilization and modernity.
