

The behaviour of young boys is the subject of comments the world over. Particularly distressing is the manifestation of insulting conduct towards school and college-going girls. No condemnation can be very severe for such conduct. What are the causes that have led to this kind of behaviour? Lack of reverence for women is only an offshoot from a larger evil. The real tragedy is the complete lack of self-discipline among young men. This lack of control must be dealt with severely.

We all know that the best way to teach a child anything is by example. But cases of young children who misbehave prove only too clearly that many parents and teachers are not doing their duty properly. Both at home and at school, far too many children are brought up to do only that they like, to do a job badly, to leave it unfinished, to have anything they want at the expense of other people's convenience. Parents say they cannot manage their children and it is getting more difficult to find competent teachers who can manage a class. And then the behaviour of parents and teachers themselves does not always inspire respect. But perhaps the greatest harm is done by the perpetual rousing of the senses by posters, films, magazines, cheap music, advertisements, etc. Society will have to make a much more determined effort to mould the character of children if this moral deterioration is to be halted.

leads to many other evils such as ~~disrespecting~~ and ~~disregarding~~ a pious woman. Furthermore, these young boys cannot control their emotions and actions that result in grave disaster. They must be dealt harshly for saving future generations.

Question 3.

→ How are parents and teachers responsible for this?

Ans. Parents and teachers are also responsible for this serious situation. They do not play their active role in inspiring a child. Instead of leading by examples, they let the young blood do what they like. This results in a person who usually leaves his job unfinished, and ~~causes~~ harm to others. Additionally, lack of competent teachers and devoted parents inculcates such tendencies in a teenager who becomes a burden on society.

Question 4.

→ To what extent are films and magazines harmful?

Ans. Films and magazines are harmful to a greater extent than other factors in such a scenario. There are usually bold scenes in it that incite the senses of young boys. They are unable to differentiate between imaginary and real world. As a result, these boys manifest abusive conduct in their daily life. In a nutshell, films and magazines should be designed in such a manner to educate the young ones, and make them an effective part of the society.
