Title: The Doctrine of a Strenuous Life

Mischief in the world result from those who act all the time. They are; however, unaware of the purpose of their acts. Devil, the busiest of all creation, dislikes idleness all the time. Everyone works in his empire non-stop. The problem of the world is not because of idleness, rather it lacks passivity. Its energy is misused. For instance, if leaders, in summer of 1914, were to stay idle, then the world might have been in a much better condition than today. Nay! the idea of a working life is still not countered and work must be done. Again if the leaders of Europe had not acted upon in Versailles, then their as well as affair of the world could have been calm. Even if today's European statesmen denounce idleness as a crime, something can be achieved. Also, despite plagues of evils, religious concerts focus on trends of dancing and clothing. Mental recovery was better for them inspite of conferences.
