The: Social inequalities in Manto's views

Manto was an observer of social ambivalence. His opponents called him vulgar and questioning about the moral purpose of his writings. Despite this, he explores harsh realities of life. In the view of Freud, Manto unveiled the depressed classes of humans - His middle and lower middle class characters, feel, think, and act like humans to meet his social standard of writing. Like other writers Manto's dealt with own self and their works expresses struggle to find own purpose.
