

Date: _____

Q Despite monarchy British has best democracy: Elucidate?

1) Introduction:

British has one of the oldest and most stable form of governments. Its political system evolved with the passage of time and now it has best system that influence in other ^{country's} ^{political} systems. ~~of the world~~

British political structure comprised of monarchy as well as democracy. Monarchy is constitutional act just like a rubber stamp, real power holds by the executive..

2) Elucidation of some factors about the rubber stamp of British monarchy:

British monarchy is the oldest form of government, in ancient power really held by the king but with the passage of time king power is limited.

Date: _____

Before magna carta, king is absolute authority.

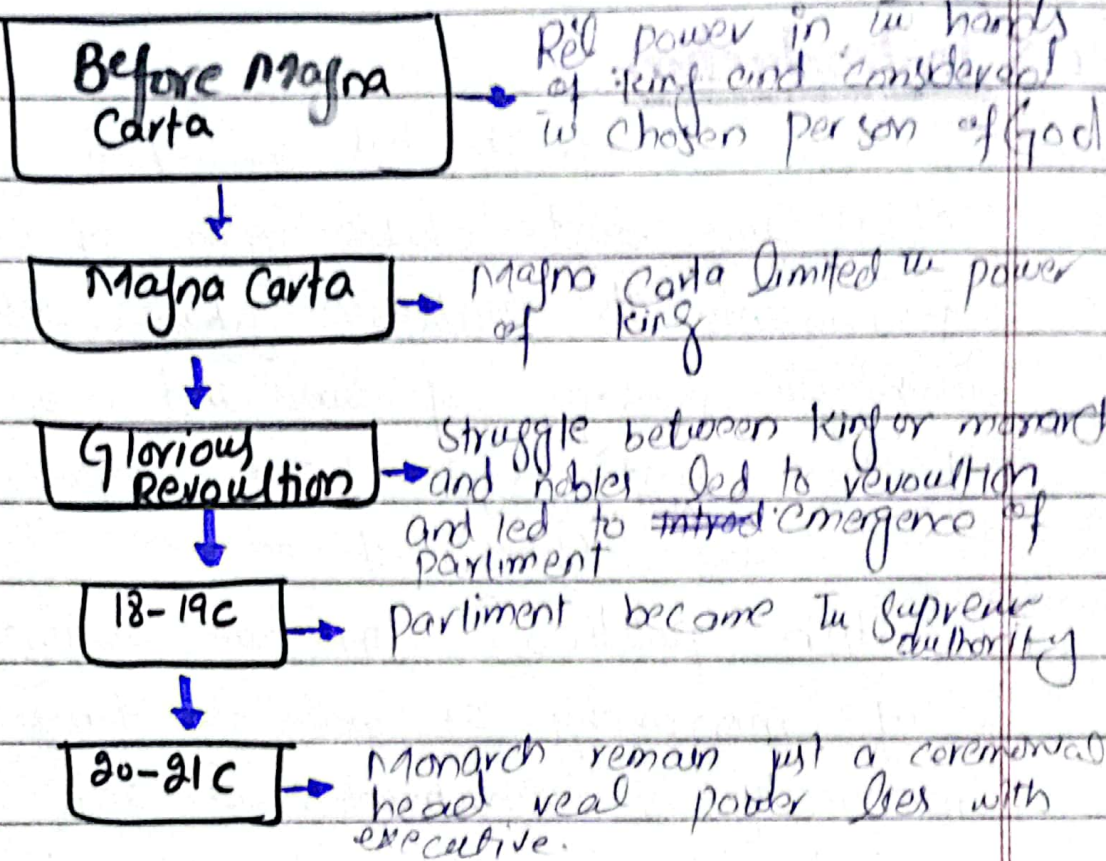

Figure shows how monarchy power evolved with the passage of time.

The king is dead long live the king:

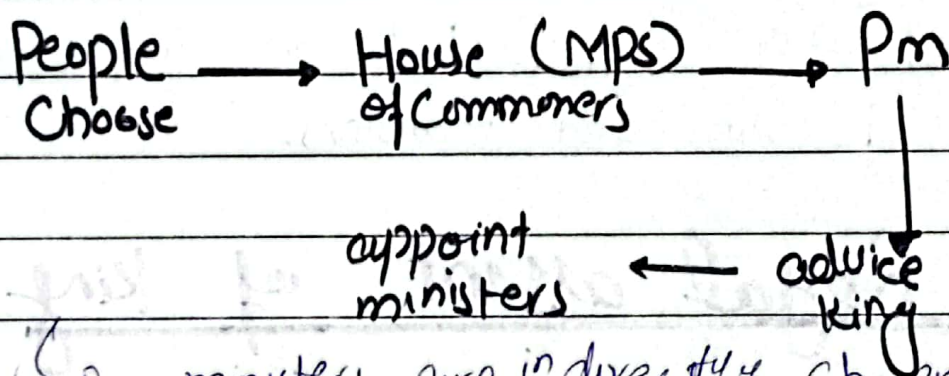

After 20-21 century monarch became a symbol of ceremonial head real power lies in the hands of executive.

Executive power and appointment:

Though king has the executive

Date: _____

power he has in authority to choose ministers, ambassadors etc., but it's a formal appointment, king appoint them in the advice of PM and PM is member of House of Commons, who represent the will of people.

So, ministers are indirectly chosen by people through their representative elected MPs and PM.

Foreign affairs on advice of ministers

King is (Ceremonial) head ^{makes} deal foreign dealing, appoint ambassadors to other countries and welcomed in ambassadors of other countries, sign dealings, relations all on in

Date: _____

advice of ministers who are in chosen people of public.

Peace and war decisions

Though king is Commander in Chief of army staff and take in decisions of war and peace of any conflict but on the advice of pm and ministers.

Royal assent of king

If Lower house of legislature pass a pass, the bill not become a Parliament act until and unless king does not sign it, but it's a formality
if king has no right to override or challenge the bill. If a bill is passed by Lower house with simple majority no one has authority to challenge it even king or pm cannot stop it.
So, where house of commons are

Date: _____

representative of public, so they make law according to the will of people.

Electoral System of British Government

In British people have the authority to choose their representative they choose, and their people in house of commons are supreme power. King or monarch has no power at all.

Dissolution of Parliament:

Monarch or king has the power to dissolve the legislature but it's a formal power, real power is in the hands of Prime minister, PM asked King to dissolve it. For example PM Benjamin of UK once asked Queen Elizabeth to dissolve

Date: _____

in parliament in order to reelection.

Vote of no Confidence:

The chosen people of public
like the house of commons has authority to question executive body like ministers and PM,
if they found something suspicious
or ~~with~~ against public interest so,
they have the right to pass
a bill or vote of no confidence against PM. This shows the real democracy that lies in the hands of people.

Flexibility of UK Constitution and democracy.

The UK Constitution is flexible in nature and house of commons has authority to amend it easily without

Date: _____

any difficult procedure. House of Commons will use the will of people and amend the Constitution.

For example in 1911, 1949 House of Commons present an act to limit the power of House of Lords, who are Clergy and nobles and do ^{according to} their own interest. So, house of commons means public has limit their authority.

Conclusion:

In UK the monarch is working and still exist but real power lies in parliament especially in house of Commons who are elected by the people. As someone well says

~~the~~ "the king reigns but does not rule"

So, Truly British has best democracy because it follows

Date: _____

In will of people, monarch is just a ceremonial head of state, and British democracy is the best example for all other countries as democracy means "rule by the people".

Abraham Lincoln define it:

"Democracy is Government of the people, by the people and for the people" British successfully implement this definition in their Government and that's why it ~~has~~ is a democratic country.

