

Title:

A Trip to Cherokee

The writer wished to spend the vacation where there is peace and tranquility. On friends suggestion, author went to a city called Cherokee, Oklahoma. The traveller first visited a town called Qualla Boundary and witnessed the ancient village life, along with scenic mountains. The tourist then visited a souvenir shop and met with a tribesman who was fluent in English. ~~and~~ George described the way by which they earn. The tribesman told the visitor about earning through Agriculture and "Bingo weekend". George stated that along with wood-cutting, the villagers earn through playing games with tourists. The author, then, went to a museum and saw animal fossils displayed there. After returning to home, author wished to visit the same places.
