

Contradictory Perspectives of Colonization

Psychological architecture of domination is the highlighting indicator of imperial hierarchies. The former colonials have made their rule legitimised by civilizational narrative and claimed that colonised were being benefited from their rule. Whereas, the colonised were fluctuating between the sense of satisfaction and dissatisfaction under colonial powers. Former colonials considered decolonisation as a moral loss more than a territorial loss. Colonial history is still divided between contradictory perspectives.

Total no. of words = 180

Rewritten words = 68

Israel's Absurdity Vs. Palestine Ideals Israel's Notion of Independence

Nizar Hassan was an anthropologist and filmmaker. In 1994, he made a film named "Independence" in which he asked Palestinian debaters about Israel's notion of independence and called it a clear absurdity. Later on, when Israel was planning to occupy more land and add to already stolen one, he made another film named "My Grandfather's Path". This film emphasized on the wise selection of enemies as it would have a negative impact on one's own nation. He advised Palestinians to control anger against Israel's action and highlighted beautiful ideas and aspirations that Palestine comprised of. This anger would lead to lose one's sense of self and advised to never fall in this trap.

DATE: / /

Total no. of words = 346

Re-written words = 113

The Power of Genuine Liking in Teaching (2019) Love Vs. Rules - Shaping Child's Behavior

Modern educational experts mainly focus on not interfering with children rather than enjoying with them. Teachers' behavior towards children shapes their attitude either positively or negatively. Instead of treating them as tools, teachers need to show genuine pleasure in their company which prevents emotional damage. However, education should not be a full-time profession, as overworked teachers ultimately lose their natural liking, which leads to tiredness and frustration towards children. The real friendliness of teachers among children do not need strict rules for handling child's unusual behavior. In fact, the natural affection and tact will guide them and any decision will feel fair to the child.

DATE: _/ _/ _

Total no. of words = 350

Rewritten words = 106

How Weather Shapes Human Effort

(2018)

Seasonal Influence on Human Energy

The Positive Influence of Cold Climate

The advantageous impacts of cold are visible in northern Europe. Humans facing too many difficulties lose physical energies and much ease makes them lazy. In moderate cold climates, challenges stimulate human energy that are difficult but not impossible to overcome. Such conditions force humans to construct homes, wear thick clothes and bring themselves enough food after struggling all day long. In contrast, humans living in hot climatic areas are lazy as there is little need of heavy clothes and fire, they can survive all day while lying under a tree. Similarly, people become lazy in summers and energetic in winters just like in tropics and in temperate climes.

Total no. of words = 350

Rewritten words = 107