

New Brooms Sweep Clean

outline

32/100 u need to work on language and also need content enrichment

A. Introduction

Thesis statement

B. Understanding the Meaning of the Proverb

C. How New Brooms Sweep Clean?

- a. Fresh minds breed new and innovative ideas
- b. New brooms sweep clean by re-injecting energy and enthusiasm
- c. Fresh minds have out-of-the box thinking to solve any problem
- d. They bring new and structured changes in the system
- e. They have focused and goal-oriented mind-set
- f. Fresh blood always <sup>exert</sup> ~~puts~~ full efforts to achieve the set goals

- g. They are well aware and equipped with digital skills ✓
- h. They can quickly adjust<sup>to</sup> and adapt the changes ✓
- i. Fresh brooms sweep ✓ clean as they influence and lead others for change ✓
- j. They become a symbol of trust and hope ✓
- k. Through their own examples, they set new standards ✓
- l. They promote accountability and transparency ✓ ✓

D. Conclusion

it is better to write well acclaimed

~~examples where~~

Asslan is an energetic member of a company. His work ethics, dedication and loyalty towards the job, and creative mindset were the qualities that earned him the position of regional head of the company, despite being recently inducted. With such qualities and goal-oriented mindset, Asslan within no time completely turned the fate of the company. He also managed to instill the same mentality in his employees. These are the qualities of new minds and new faces that are only focused on moving forward. In this regard, the fresh minds breed new and innovative ideas. They re-inject the energy and enthusiasm in the people to achieve goals. Their out-of-the-box thinking ability helps in swift solution of any problem. Similarly, they have focused and goal-oriented mindset. This keeps them motivated for their job. They always put full efforts and leave no stone unturned to achieve the set goals. Moreover, young people are well aware of modern technologies and they are equipped with digital skills. This allows them to remain up-to-date and well-known to any new technologies being developed. In addition, they can quickly adjust and adapt to the new changes both in and out of their sector. This makes them flexible and un-predictable in their jobs. Therefore, the quotation not only means the importance of broom but how young blood and minds are key to change and moving ahead. Be it political, social, industrial, sports, economical, or any other field, the new broom will always be vital for change.

Before moving directly towards the topic that how new brooms sweep clean, it is important to understand its meaning. Figuratively, it refers to a person newly appointed to a role who works diligently to prove his worth and stand out among others. This renewed spirit often brings innovation, discipline, and productivity to a place where complacency may have set in. We often see in our daily lives that how <sup>those</sup> sectors or companies excel who bring in new faces who become a beacon of change and icon for others to follow.

This essay will examine the qualities of such people and their daily life examples.

New brooms sweep clean clean as new minds breed new and innovative. These innovative ideas bring new ways through which the set objectives can be achieved, that too maximizing the efficiency and effectiveness. The young minds open up a new world of possibilities for the set-up, he is in to deliver quickly. This makes the efficient use of resources and reduces its wastage. The newly brought innovation also allows the company to set new practices in the market and become pioneers of it. For example, Elon Musk while being a young entrepreneur revitalized the business of Twitter after acquiring it. The innovation to reduce the bot users and allow community notes to provide correct information brought a new life in the business. This reflects that how innovation through young minds can take businesses to new ideas. Thus, it re-inforces the idea that new minds through innovation and ideas bring changes.

Besides, young mind leads to change through the energy and enthusiasm that he brings. This enthusiasm influences and motivates the people that might have lost the motivation to work. This infuse of motivation helps them to shrugg-off the laziness and strive harder to complete the task. This further leads to create a healthy competition within the co-workers to achieve the set targets to stand-out among others by putting maximum efforts. For example, in a football, 11 players participate at the same time but captaincy is given to the player who not only remains energetic but also motivate others to fight hard for the win through his actions. ~~This shows that leadership is also a quality in young people, discarding the age factor. It allows them to be energetic and enthusiastic to achieve goals. Therefore, new brooms sweep clean as they are energetic and enthusiastic.~~

Similarly, young people bring changes as they think differently to solve any challenge.

Their ability to think differently and according to the challenge rather than applying set practices to solution make unpredictable and unique. This results in the timely resolving of issue without putting the objectives at risk. It further enables the company or set-up to focus on bringing and developing creativity and effective solution techniques among the employees. For instance, it was the out-of-box thinking of Sultan Menmed II, at the age of 21 years, to create a track for ships using the animal fat that surprised the enemies resulting in gaining access to the Golden Horn. This reinforces the idea that the ability to think differently is an important aspect to achieve desired results, and young minds are capable to do so. Thus, the new brooms sweep clean through their quality of unique thinking.

Likewise, they bring new and structured changes in the system. It is often seen that old systems leads to development of practices that hold back the company's aspirations and remain hurdle in way of achieving objectives. This old system allows employees to remain

keep yourself
short and well directional

their comfort zones. Moreover, old system also works on out-dated practices that denies the company to develop its competitive edge over others. To give an example, Sanna Marin, who at the age of 34 years became Finland's Prime Minister. She restructured governance with greater transparency, digital innovation, and gender inclusivity, proving how young leadership can revitalize institutions. Hence, it proves the proverb that, "New Brooms sweep clean," as they bring new and structured changes.

Moreover, young minds have focused and goal-oriented mindset. This mindset instills in them grit, perseverance, and mental strength. These qualities all together keeps them motivated and does not allow distractions to hinder their struggle. Not only this, but with goal centric minds, young people also remain ready to bear any sacrifice required to achieve their aspirations. For example, Michael Jordan, now known as one of the greatest athlete ever, did not begin his journey with success. He was cut from his school team but he remained focused on his dreams and worked hard for it, especially at his earlier age. This shows that new focused mind set and work hard to achieve goals take people to new heights. This reinstates the proverb that new brooms sweep clean by having focused and goal-oriented mindset.

Furthermore, fresh blood always puts full efforts to achieve the set goals. It is often seen people who remain at one sector for long time starts to minimize their efforts. However, this is not the case with new inductees, as they strive to push forward. They also put their full efforts to stand out among the others and become a go-to person. For this purpose, they also do not shy away from going extra mile for their company. For example, starting with a small dispensary in Karachi, Abdul Sattar Edhi dedicated his life to serve humanity at 20 years of age. Through relentless effort and compassion, he built Pakistan's largest welfare network, the Edhi Foundation. This example highlights the importance of efforts and dedication to achieve the set goals. Hence, it shows that new brooms sweep clean by putting their full efforts for goals.

Additionally, fresh faces are well aware and equipped with digital skills. In this digital and technological era, having digital skills are important factors to excel in career. In this regards, young people incorporates those skills and utilizes them for perform their tasks. This results in them being a living examples for others to follow and inculcate digital skills, to bring structured and innovative change. For instance, Mark Zuckerberg revolutionized global communication by using his digital expertise to create Facebook at just 19 years of age. His innovation and digital knowledge transformed social interaction. This example proves that tech-equipped minds reshape industries with modern vision and innovative skills. Therefore, new brooms sweep clean as they are well aware and equipped with digital skills.

In the same vein, fresh blood can quickly adjust to and adapt, new changes. Adjusting to changes and adopting them for increased efficiency proves pivotal in deciding the future of any individual, company, or even country while, change remains hurdle for others, young people become flexible according to any changing situation and quickly maneuver their plans according to that change. By doing so, they achieve their targets without any difficulties or by making any compromises. This also allows them to plan alternative paths for a single goal. For example, The United Arab Emirates exemplifies how adaptability drives progress, under new leadership. By swiftly shifting from oil-based economy to a global hub of tourism, technology, and innovation through digital governance and economic diversification, UAE became example for others to follow the change. It proves that new blooms sweep clean by quickly adjusting to and adopting new changes.

In addition, they influence and lead others for change. Change to internal environment is equally important to achieve success. This need paves way for young minds to take lead and by becoming a leader rather boss, they make path for others as well. Their fresh vision and influence motivate collective transformation within systems and society. For instance, Benazir Bhutto, despite facing immense challenges, inspired countless women in Pakistan to pursue leadership roles. As the first female P.M. of the Muslim world, she became a symbol of inspiration and guiding force for generations to come. This reflects that young people not only achieve greatness but also inspire others as well. Thus, it is evident that new brooms sweep clean by inspiring and leading others for change.

Alongside this, they become a symbol of trust and hope, guiding others towards positive transformation. This trust and hope develops from the fact that they themselves achieved great success, at a young age, fighting many challenges. This results in a kind of revolution in a society, and young people who achieved their goals, become cornerstone of this revolution. It allows the society to break free of medieval norms and traditions. To illustrate, Malala Yousafzai is regarded as guiding light and hope for millions of young girls that face difficulties in their lives. This hope developed after Malala refused to surrender before those who opposed her educational aspirations. This highlights that now young people by not giving up their dreams and fighting for those become a source of trust and hope. Therefore, it proves that new brooms sweep clean as they become symbol of trust and hope for others.

In like manner, they set new standards through their own examples. Young people, by achieving their dreams, at such a age raise the bar high and change the definition of what success means. This leads company, society, or any set-up to eliminate the factors that brings complacency and reduces motivation. This further allows those people, who become successful, to navigate and dictate the change that needs to be brought-in. For example, Thomas Edison invented light bulb at the age of 31 years, but before that he failed countless times. However, his early failures did not stopped him from achieving his aspirations. This example shows that ~~how young blood never stops striving and getting better, by learning from these mistakes, setting new standards for others.~~ Thus, it is evident that by setting their own lives as an example new brooms sweep clean.

Lastly, Fresh brooms promotes and ensures accountability and transparency. Accountability and transparency are important pillars to achieve and sustain development or improvement. Accountability ensures that everyone must get equal opportunities and that the set rules are followed properly. Similarly, transparency allows openness and clarity to be part of the system, which ensures that no immoral steps or decisions were taken. It also does not allow deception to be integrated in the system. For example, even before the advent of Islam, Holy Prophet (PBUH) was renowned for his honesty, accountability, and transparency. His moral integrity and transparent dealings earned him unmatched respect. This shows that true leadership begins with personal accountability and trustworthiness. Therefore, it is proved that new brooms sweep clean by promoting and ensuring transparency.

To conclude, from the whole discussion, it is proved that how young blood and young minds bring changes in lives of themselves and resultantly in others as well. Their struggle, focus, determination, and leadership qualities influences others to not only continue their hard work but also to dream big and dream new. So that they may also become inspiration for others. The qualities to inspire others include, their dedication and determination to remain focused on achieving objectives. Similarly, their ability to remain committed towards goals and always put full efforts to achieve those set goals, also plays a role in this regard. They also remain well aware and equipped with digital skills to sweep clean their goals. They also have the ability to quickly adjust to and adapt the changes, that occur in their surroundings, for their benefits. Similarly, they influence and lead others and become a symbol of trust and hope. Likewise, by setting their own lives as an example, they set standards of success and promote and ensure accountability and transparency. In last, it would not be wrong to say that the proverb <sup>does</sup> not only highlights the importance of new brooms, but emphasizes on the importance of removing old, ineffective habits or systems and introducing improvement, order, and efficiency. It is also imperative that these new systems must be incorporated at individual, societal, and global level, so that a renewed and well-structured development is achieved for everyone equally.