Interpreters of God's Will

Two things necessitated human connection to god. First, human fear emanating from mysteries of life. Second, human <sup>fragility</sup> against the vast nature. A profound knowledge of god's wishes, therefore, was essential to establish this connection. In ancient Greece, this knowledge was provided by soothsayers who interpreted signs from god and conveyed them to mortals. Decoding messages from natural phenomena, dream interpretation and palmistry were the methods used by them to transcribe god's wish. Sometimes, god also communicated with mankind through an intermediary i.e. a prophet. Hence, prophethood was also a mode of connection between god and mankind. Oracles were situated in sanctuaries and remained connected to God or Gods. For instance, Zeus' message was communicated to humans by Apollo - an eminent soothsayer in ancient Greece.
