Every era brings with it unfavorable circumstances that must be accepted with a heavy heart. Sometimes nature throws at us irrelevant things for trial purposes and we have to face them headstart. The present is one such depiction. Every century brings innovation with it. The progresses of natural sciences has also shown unpractical results. Nature bounds us to look after unwanted inventions in order to protect the environment.

Lahore is not an ancient hub of politics but also culture and traditions. This city has been home to cultural peak of the Mughals as well as Sikhs. The advent of cultural language and literature are also associated with this city. It has been the centre for Sufi mystics/saints. The tomb of famous Sufi writer Ali Hajveri, popularly known as Data Ganj Baksh is also located in Lahore. He was author of renowned book on mysticism "Kashf al Mahboob". During the British Era, the traditional values of Lahore were copied in India. The significance of this city met no decline even after the formation of Pakistan.
