

FRAILTY IS NO MORE THE NAME OF WOMEN

Thesis Statement: Women in the world appear frail under patriarchal system. In contrast, it may be believed that women have proven their strength in society. However, their frailty continues to persist.

Outline:

I. Introduction

II. Women frailty in the world:

- A. Limited educational opportunities
- B. Restrictions on personal freedom
- C. Forced early marriages
- D. Domestic violence issues
- E. Workforce harassment
- F. Poor healthcare access
- G. Low political participation
- H. Limited role in decision-making process
- I. Discriminatory wage gap
- J. Limited financial resources

III. Some people believe that women are no longer frail:

- A. Challenge stereotypes in society
- B. & Support families by income earning
- D. & Lead nation as head of state

- C. Legal equality in the constitution
- IV. Women's equality still persists:
- A. Endure society's persistent stereotypes
 - B. Limited workforce participation
 - C. Low political participation
 - D. Legal equality not fully enforced
- V. Conclusion

The Essay:

For centuries, men held power and shaped societies through patriarch system that dominated every sphere of life. On the other hand, women were marginalized and deprived of their rights. Change began in the late 18th century when women stood up for their rights and gradually secured them.

However, despite securing their rights in constitutions, women continue to remain equal in many societies.

IS GENDER EQUITY A MYTH?

Thesis Statement: Gender equality is a myth. It is visible in social, political, and economic spheres of life. On the contrary, some it is believed, that gender equality is real. However, gender equality remains a myth.

Outline:

- I. Introduction
- II. Gender equality is a myth:
 - A. Less educational opportunities
 - B. Social pressure for force ^{marriage}
 - C. Domestic violence
 - D. Low political participation
 - E. Economic dependence of women
 - F. Limited job opportunities
 - G. Wage gap in employment
 - H. Workforce discrimination
 - I. Discrimination in inherited property
- III. Some people believe that gender equality is real:
 - A. Improvement in female education
 - B. Legal equality of rights
 - C. Women increasingly entering in workforce
 - D. Professional achievements of women

IV. Gender equality remains a myth:

- A. Limited education for women
- B. Legal equality not fully enforced
- C. Limited workforce participation
- D. Limited achievements

V. Conclusion

The Essay:

For centuries, men held power and shaped societies through patriarchal system that dominated every sphere of life. On the other hand, women were marginalized and deprived of their rights. Change began in the late 18th century, when women stood up for their rights and gradually secured them. However, despite securing their rights in constitutions, women continue to remain frail in many societies, proving that gender equality is a myth.