

Passage:

Friendship is one of the most valuable relationships in human life. Unlike blood relations, it is chosen voluntarily. A true friend supports us in times of difficulty and shares our happiness. However, friendship demands honesty, loyalty, and mutual respect. A selfish or dishonest friend can bring more harm than good. Therefore, one must be wise in choosing friends, as they influence our character and decisions.

Friends: A family we choose Friendships, chosen voluntarily, are valuable relationships. They demand honesty and loyalty and provide support in any situation. Friends must be chosen wisely as they shape characters.

Scanned with CamScanner