

Ancient Greece and Their Dogma

In Ancient Greece, soothsayers had the ability to know the signs or signals of gods. They foretold by interpreting different events that were occurred in the nature. Among the events, the interpretation of dreams and observation of palm were very famous. However, there were a lot of incidents where gods did not show themselves through signs and signals but directly participated through an intermediate who passed the message of gods to the people. These practices for predicting the future were the base of ancient soothsayers. They were attached to one or another gods. For instance, Appolo, a soothsayer, was connected with Zeus, a god of Ancient Greece.

Words of Passage: 342

Words of Precise: 112