Precis

Treatment of Children

Educational theorists have prioritized not interfering with children's freedom and ignored the positive aspect of their company. Children are able to give response and accept prohibitions; they should not be considered as a tool for social struggle. Their presence should be valued. A teacher having this ability knows when to interfere with children's freedom without causing any psychological damage. ~~Education~~ It is not possible for children because they are overburdened. Education should not be a full-time profession but a part-time duty for those who spend most of their time away from children. The absence of strict discipline causes fatigue among the young which in turn leads to irritation.

Rules should be made in advance for treatment of naughty children but no rules can replace love and understanding.
