People from temperate countries of northern Europe yield beneficial effects of cold climate. It acts as an overcomable hurdle, thus, stimulates surmountable energy. Such hurdles push us to utilize our powers. Similarly, extreme cold numbs energy; hot climate does not allow much activity but moderate cold motivates humans to increase activity. He has to build houses, and obtain clothes, cut trees and dig coal to keep himself warm and make fires. In order to nourish his body, he has to make himself food. It is different from how people live in tropics. They do not need much clothes or fire. They need lesser food which can be procured without much effort. Some differences can be observed in our lives during different weathers. In summers, we tend to get lazy, while in winters we are more active.

How to deal with children in a better way?

The importance of enjoying the company of children is overlooked by modern theorists. If one is affectionate towards children, they will let him/her take the lead without resistance. They should not be considered as one's social endeavour or an outlet for stress. The correct approach is to enjoy the company of children with any purpose. It will give freedom to children and minimize psychological damage. It is impossible for burdened teachers to maintain affection for children that's why education should not be a full-time job rather a side hustle. Treatment towards children should be based on friendly impulse and liking for children them instead of rules because there is nothing second to affection.

Importance of morality for survival

It is important for modern people to make use of conscious effort to stay kind and empathy should be essential part of ones upbringing. It is the only way to inculcate sense of responsibility in mankind and to improve chances of survival. For educational institutions it is difficult to produce moral people which was the responsibility of church previously. Church failed and produced men, greedy for power and wealth. These men have nothing to do with morality. For them, power is everything and it might lead to nuclear war. That is why universities must inculcate moral values in human beings. Love and kindness must be infused with intellect.

Greek Philosophers and their work

Some Greek scholars dealt with philosophy as a purely abstract field while others included concrete aspects as well. Some made use of philosophy to earn money while others used it to change the course of politics in Greek courts. For Plato, philosophy was so much more than just creative ideas. For him, it was knowledge that could be applied to broader fields of life so that it could bring positive change. Aristotelian philosophy was based on multiple disciplines so it provided solution for every possible issue. True purpose of philosophy - which is to improve human character - was realized during his era.
