~~Introduction:~~

United States of America had been a sole superpower for decades ago. Its hegemony has now shifted towards Asia, keeping China at center. China has emerged as superpower lagging behind USA in political, economic and diplomatic aspects. There are various modes used by China to overcome the world. It has invested in infrastructure through Belt and Road Initiative to connect the world. Through trade diplomacy it has enhanced global interdependence. In addition, Global Security Initiative is also a threat for existence of western alliance like NATO. By giving condition free loans to the developing states, has also reduced the reliance over western financial institutions. With the advancement in technology, China has no competitor in 5G, AI tools and fintech across the world. It has promoted multilateralism sidelining the western unilateral views. In the global market china has bypassed the U.S dollar with the digital yuan. It also addresses the issues of states through platforms like SCO. USA's interventionist agenda has now been replacing with cooperative security that shows a secure measure for third world countries, which prefer sovereignty over external pressure. Moreover, China is also showing a responsible behaviour for environmental protection, promoting green technology. It is also reshaping the global order from unipolar to multipolar, making the world integrated through humanitarian assistance. Infact, China has always been a supporter for global peace, and also played a role as mediator in different conflicts between the countries. Therefore, China is sidelining the sole superpower using smart techniques from different aspects, alongwith this its cultural mode is portraying its soft image in western-led hegemonic views.

China promotes economic sustainability to strengthen the world. It has commenced the BRI projects to connect the Asia, Africa and West. It will enhance trade cooperation to mitigate the western reliance. Ultimately, making the world dependent on chinese economic policies.

For instance, CPEC connects Gwadar to Xinjiang for trade purposes, that shows shared future for both states.

China has overcome the western market through finance policies. The Asian Infrastructure Investment Bank and New Development Bank provide condition free loans to the countries, that lessens the reliance over U.S. led institutions like IMF and World Bank.

For instance, China has bypassed the U.S. dollar by introducing yuan.

China has escalated global interdependence to integrate the world.

Its BRI project has enhanced trade among Asia, Africa and West. Provision of condition-free loans has made the agreements easier to pursue. It has ultimately increased the trust over Chinese trade deals that strengthen the global interdependence.

China's latest technological mode is ruling the ^{over} world's tech-market.

The companies like Huawei, fintech has been promoting 5G and AI tools, which has no competitor.

The US digital market have fallen down due to the foothold of China in tech-market.

China promotes strategic partnership to resist the US alliances. It has empowered its military with modern weapons to protect the roads and seas for safe trade across the world. The Global Security Initiative is threat to the existence of US led NATO alliances.

China is reshaping the global order from unipolar to multipolar. USA has been a sole superpower due to its interventionist agenda, that threatened the developing states significantly, third world countries. The cooperative security idea of China has brought the poor countries out of external pressure, and protecting their sovereignty using soft power. World has ultimately shifted toward ~~multipolar~~ order.

China is playing a responsible role in protecting the environment. The promotion of green technology and renewable energy resources, shows the concern of China to protect the environment through environmental-friendly policies. This would resultantly benefit the undeveloped countries than industrial North, that are major actors of pollution in atmosphere.

China aims to enhance regional influence to gain global dominance. China through multilateral agreements have made the world dependent over chinese diplomacy. This clearly challenges the western ~~cor~~ democratic rule through reduction in trust and reliance over US led policies. The regional pacts have strengthened south-south cooperation, as well as enhanced global dominance of china through different investments to integrate the world, across Europe and Africa.

China has been an active participator to protect humanity. During Covid-19, all the countries were protecting their nations, leaving the others helpless. But,

China not only safeguarded their people, but also provided vaccines like Sinopharm and Sinovac to other countries to combat the pandemic. This has promoted reliance over Chinese medical assistance, challenging the US aid.

Conclusion:

China has now emerged as a superpower due to its efforts in diplomatic, economic, social, and political fields to counter the US influence across the world. The hegemonic views of USA have transformed into cooperation through trade, and making people dependent over each other through bilateral and multilateral agreements. This broader view of China has made the world a "global village", in which shared future is the ultimate goal to pursue the soft power. Moreover, Chinese diplomacy is aimed at protecting the sovereignty and territorial integrity of state, and to refrain from global wars to maintain peace. However, US led interventionist agenda has made the world fearful and threatening for the underdeveloped countries, which cannot take decisive measures independently without any external pressure. China is also introducing technology in the world to make them stronger against rival using modern tools. The AI generated equipments have given a foothold to China in tech-market. This over-reliance of others over china has also suppressed the influence of OSA, that is a clear indication of power transformation from West to Asia.
