Contemporary challenges to Muslim Ummah

① ⇒ Lack of Unity among the Muslim Ummah:-

It is one of the most biggest challenges faced by Muslims in these times is the lack of unity among the Muslim Ummah. Muslims, who once stood as a strong pillar of social cohesion, are now like a fragmented society divided due to multiple differences. This fragmentation occurs due to cultural practices, differences on the base of interpretation, sects and other things. For example; ongoing conflict between sunni and shia has given rise to multiple sectarian issues and extremist ideologies for each other. Such conflicts demand that Muslims communities stand firmly against it.

Thus, lack of unity is one of contemporary challenge faced by Muslims.

② ⇒ Influence of west on Muslim countries:-

The second most significant challenge faced by muslim countries is the growing influence of the west on Muslim countries. Often, this concept is occurs due to inflicted superiority complex of the west. The difference between western and Muslim have raised concerns re-

- regarding right and wrong, as the west views Muslims as backwards and inferior people with no modern education or technological advancements. For instance, Turkey under Mustafa Kemal Atatürk underwent significant Westernisation in the early 20th century, including the adoption of a secular legal system, replacing Islamic law (Sharia) in many areas of governance.

This shows the changes Muslims have undergone many changes owing to the influence of western culture. Thus, the growing influence of the west on the Muslim countries serves as another challenge.

③ → Misconception of Terrorism and Extremism about Muslims:-

Another significant issue is the misconception of terrorism and extremism about Muslims. This discrimination and hatred against the Muslims in society. Most Western nations view Muslims as terrorists, extremists, and violent people. Many people wrongly associated the actions of a small minority of violent extremists with the beliefs of over a billion Muslims worldwide, ignoring the vast majority who advocate for peace and co-existence. For example, in the case of 9/11 attacks in the USA, the West equated all Muslims as terrorists who spread violence, whereas in reality, majority of Muslims condemned the attacks and stood with the casualties with America faced.

This illustrates how one event can undermine the true teachings of Islam and lead to the marginalization of Muslims. Thus, the misconception of terrorism and extremism linked to Muslims is a great challenge to the growth of Muslims.

Islamophobia and external propaganda are also significant issues faced by Muslims in today's time. Islamophobia is driven by external propaganda as various media outlets and narrative have negative image of Muslims; as a result, the Muslim community is seen as reserved, extremist and rigid mindset people. For instance, media often declared Muslim as terrorist or extremists, harmful stereotypes that foster fear and mis-understanding in society. This shows how several factors have shaped the Muslim picture in the West and how such narrative like Islamophobia, hamper the teachings of Islam. Thus, Islamophobia and external propaganda serves as another challenge for muslims in today's time.

necessary for Muslims to overcome sectarian, ethnic and regional differences to form a cohesive front. Once Muslims achieve unity among themselves, this would ultimately strengthen political and economic alliance between Muslim countries. For instance Allah in Quran's surah Al Imran (3:103) says;

وَعْتَمِدُوا بِرَبِّهِ الْإِسْلَامَ كَمَا كَانُوا
عَلَيْهِ قَبْلَ هَذَا لَعَلَّكُمْ أَتَقْوُونَ

"And hold firmly to the rope of Allah all together and do not become divided."

So, adhering to the principles laid down by Allah and holding the religion firmly can help the Muslim be united at one platform.

② ⇒ Strengthening the foundation of OIC:-

It is most important for Muslims to strengthening the foundation of Organization of Islamic co-operation. It is high time to bring reforms in organization like OIC that give Muslims a platform to address the issue, they face, align all Muslims countries at one agenda, and work together for a better result. Muslims can work on developing stronger mechanisms for conflict resolution. For example the ongoing Israel and Gaza conflict can be solved if the OIC, including all Muslim countries, take action together, boycotts trade and take measures that would destabilise Israel and its allies resulting in withdrawal from Gaza. Hence, reforming organizations like OIC can help Muslims stand united against western threats.
