

The Greek's Belief in Gods

Ancient Greek feared Gods and looked for help through oracles. They believed Gods guided human life and daily decisions. Priests and Prophetesses shared messages from Gods to people. They entered special states to receive divine message clearly. People visited temples to ask questions about future events. Each oracles was linked with different Gods and rituals. Apollo was the main God of Prophecy and guidance. He delivered Zeus decisions to ordinary people through message. Delphi was the most famous center for prophetic messages. Dodona was the oldest oracle with great historical importance. These practice shaped beliefs and guide people's daily behaviour. Greeks trusted oracles to understand fate and future clearly.

Original words count = 322

Ater Precise words count = 111