Scientists and psychologists have accepted Darwin's theory of evolution and his observation. Darwin has adopted physical strength as a touchstone of fitness. Psychologists have observed potential of man. No attempt has been made to combine both approaches.

This leads to civilisation on the basis of economic consideration which is converted into "economic being". The modern man used two philosophies: capitalism and communism. These two philosophies together restricted the evolution of man as cultural being and from different kinds of feelings.

Scientists are using natural forces for the destruction of other countries. This raised many questions concerning the role of different powers that are guiding human history. The relationship between universe, life, and man has not been studied collectively.
