

Human nature's labyrinthine corridors echo with whispers of irrationality, where emotions reign like sultans in shadowy courts. The narcissistic mirror reflects our self-absorption's distorted visage, a haunting reminder of ego's prismatic gaze refracting reality. Like autumn leaves danced by capricious winds, our desires swirl beyond reason's tenuous tethers. Emotional intelligence gleams as a lantern in darkened alleys of interaction, guiding us through others' unseen labyrinths of longing and fear. Primal instincts lurk beneath civility's polished veneer, puppet masters of our most calculated moves. In the chiaroscuro of human affairs, self-awareness flickers like a candle against darkness, illuminating fragments of our tumultuous interior landscapes. Greene's laws hover like spectral sentinels, observing our navigation of this inner maelstrom. Relationships become an alchemical crucible where ego's base metals meet the philosopher's touchstone of empathy. The human heart is a midnight drumbeat of contradictions, pulsing secrets logic cannot wholly decipher. Amidst this swirl, mastery of self emerges as both burden and luminous possibility.

Human face difficulty in understanding his self during chaos created by his irrational nature and emotion dominated nature, where ego reflect the reality of disrupted inside and unreal desires.

Poor emotional Quotient guiding toward more complexities. Primal instincts are shadowed and self awareness is dying and human's self is controlled. Relation are transformed by ego and truth are not understood
