

Education: A path to enlightenment

Knowledge is power. It is recognized by everyone, but its interpretation understands a few people. Education is power in real sense. It provides awareness to the masses. Education increases the tolerance of society. Education develops a nation through working in collaboration. It is education which empowers generations politically. People become aware about their rights and duties. Furthermore, science and technology becomes the fate of the people unless education is ~~not~~ necessary for all. Moreover, education begets the adroit young generations. Furthermore, health conditions of people becomes sustainable for people. Yet, developing states lack the planning for education. Comprehensive policies need to be introduced. Pakistan is a state, its 26 million children remain out of schools. Education can improve society while problems need to be addressed as soon as possible.
