Title:-

Freedom and Guidance
in Education

Precis:-

There are three school of thoughts on the question of freedom of education. One believes that, children should be completely free. Second, believes that they should be under authority. The third one believe that they should be free but still behave well. The last group has major support though it lacks logical sense. Supporters of this group argue that education should just provide an environment for spontaneous development and have no positive purpose. Humans live in communities which require co-operation, which could not result from spontaneous impulse alone. Education equips children with knowledge of science and technology. Education must provide growth opportunities as well as mental and moral guidance. which cannot be acquired alone.
