Imagine a world where women get credit and award for half of their invention and discovery, then the definition of genius would have been different. Life is a name of cooperation between humans as we all are social animals. Similarly, cooperation between men and women is essential, however; due to patriarchy the relationship has become competitive which has generated exclusive policies and labelization of women by men.

Nevertheless, the cooperation can be achieved by addressing historical grievances, rewarding women for their work, and promoting inclusive policies for female. The essay will discuss how life is not a competition between men and women rather it is a name of cooperation as both genders complements each other.
