

Climate Resilience: A Public Duty.

Outline.

1. Introduction
2. What is Climate Resilience?
3. Climate Resilience is a public duty.
 - 3.1 - Governments need to make policies to decrease GHG emissions.
 - 3.2 Effective measures must be taken to enforce new policies.
 - 3.3 Development of climate resilient infrastructure.
 - 3.4 Political unification on climate resilience oppositional parties must unite together to on climate resilience
 - 3.5 Climate resilience must be considered a priority over economical gain.
President Trump withdraw from Paris agreement as his focus is

Climate Resilience: A Public

economical gain:

3.6 Self-Accountability of actions.

India's aggressive measures to release water during rainfalls towards in Pakistan.

3.7 Use of modern technology to build climate resilience.

4. way forward

4.1 Unity of all countries on Paris agreement as responsible countries.

4.2 Providing Economical support to less developed countries to build climate resilience.

4.3 Improving countries relationship with countries via international organization platforms.

5 Conclusion.

Thesis statement: climate resilience is a public duty. A shift in human policies can bring noticeable difference in climate changes.