

DATE: ___/___/___

There is no such thing as coincidence in this world

1- Introduction

2- There is no such thing as coincidence in this world

(a-1) Dreams are not accidental but a result of one's unconscious fears and desires

► Freudian psychoanalytic

(a-2) Opportunity does not show up accidentally, the consistent search for one realizes it

► "what you seek is seeking you"

- Imam Gazali

(2.3) Success is not coincidental; it requires consistent struggle and sacrifice

► case in point: Muhammad Ali Jinnah

(2.4) Age and maturity do not coincide accidentally, but experience cause it

► case in point: Life of Mr. Gandhi

(2.5) It is no coincidence that great leaders are born in societies where they are most required; it is society itself that creates greatness out of ordinary people

► Nelson Mandela and South African society

(2.6) Science proves coincidence of events as mere human ignorance

► Newtonian physics — case of gravity

(2.7) civilizations do not fall suddenly, but gradually as a result of unnoticed

DATE: ___/___/___

internal decay

- Ibn-e-Khaldun's concept of 'assabiyyah' (social cohesion) and 'Rise and fall of empires'

(2.8) Industrial revolution in Europe was not a coincidence, but a result of European cultural norms that favored capitalism

- Max Weber's studies on Calvinism and capitalism

(2.9) wars are not coincidental, but a result of political grievances, deeply rooted in belligerents' history

- Great wars in Europe: WWI and WWII

(2.10) Gendered division of labor in almost every culture is not a coincidence, but a result of historical, evolutionary, economic subjugation of women

- Engels' book, "The origin of Family, state, and private property"

(2.11) The co-occurrence of economic instability and political revolutions is not a coincidence, but a result of the fact that economy serves as a foundation of human societies

- ▶ Karl Marx's Historical Materialism
- ▶ Arab spring in Middle East

(2.12) In today's globalized world, there is no such thing as coincidence, as every social system is connected to and influences every other system

- ▶ Social Media has fostered a global culture, leading to similar desires, fears, and ambitions of individuals

3 - Conclusion

DATE: ___/___/___

What a coincidence that universe chose to begin around 13.8 billion years ago. Why there is something instead of nothing, is the primary question that both science and philosophy struggle to answer. The quest for the answer of this 'why', reveals that both science and philosophy refuse to accept coincidence as the suitable answer for the existence of universe. Although both diverge in their methodologies, both converge on the fact that there is no such thing as coincidence in this world. Coincidence refers to the co-occurrence of two or more events that on surface level seems accidental, lacking any cause. However, ~~upon~~ deeper analysis of these events, would reveal that what seems unintentional and accidental is actually structured, patternized, and caused in relation. Dreams are often viewed as accidental, but in reality they are a result of one's unconscious fears and desires. Opportunity doesn't show up accidentally, the consistent search for one realizes it. Science has proved coincidence of events as mere human ignorance. Civilizations don't fall suddenly, but gradually as a result of unnoticed internal decay. Even wars, individual success, political revolutions, and gendered division of labor, are not coincidental, but a result of causal factors beneath them. Especially, in today's globalized world, there is no such thing as coincidence, as all social systems are connected and influence each other. Hence, at surface level the co-occurrence of two or more events might seem as accidental; however, upon deeper analysis, it becomes evident that causality is long established and there is no such thing as coincidence in this world.

To begin with, dreams are not accidental but a result of one's unconscious fears and desires. Dreams are often viewed as accidental because of their disorganized and bizarre imagery. When one faces something in their conscious life that resembles to what one saw in one's dream, one calls it a coincidence. However, what one has faced and what one saw in dreams were both the result of one's unknown unconscious fears and desires. These fears and desires are often suppressed by conscious mind, but are resurfaced in dreams when conscious mind sleeps. Freudian psychoanalytic explained dreams as not something that is accidental and irrelevant but a reflection of unconscious mind. Thus, dreams are not accidental, reinforcing the fact that there is no coincidence in this world.

lastly, in today's globalized world, there is no such thing as coincidence, as ~~an~~ every social system is connected to and influences every other system. Globalization has led to increased interconnectedness, creating a global culture. What previously was mistaken as coincidence between two events, today, the causality of that incidence is credited to globalization, increasing the chances of incidence between two seemingly distant events. For instance, social media has fostered a global culture, leading to similar desires, fears, and ambitions of individuals. Thus, when previously two individuals' dressing matched, people viewed it as coincidence; however, due to similar unsumption of trends today, such incidence's causality is well understood. Hence, globalized world today has debunked the ambiguity of coincidence, reinforcing ~~that~~ the fact that there is no such thing as coincidence in this world.

To sum up, there is no such thing as coincidence in this world. Although, at surface level, the co-occurrence of two or more events might seem as accidental, upon deeper analysis, it would become evident that the causality of such incidence is long established. From dreams, opportunities, success, maturity to fall of civilizations, wars, and revolutions, nothing is accidental, sudden, or beyond causality. Even the birth of great leaders in the societies that required them the most is not coincidental, but it is society itself that shaped greatness out of otherwise ordinary people. The gendered division of labor in almost every culture is not coincidental, but an evolutionary economic subjugation of women, that all societies evolved through. Lastly, the globalization in today's world has made causality evident more than before between two seemingly distant events as interconnectedness has fostered a global culture. Thus, all these diverse human experiences, indicate towards the fact that there is no such thing as coincidence in this world.