D: Conclusion

"Peace is not the absence of conflict, but the ability to handle conflict by peaceful means." said by Ronald Reagan. Peace is a pivotal element for the growth and prosperity of a country. It is the only means to ensure everlasting cohesion and unity among the people. Similarly, human beings have been from various phases of prosperity and progress. Likewise, they have experienced dark and bright eras also in their history. The primitive phase provided more brutality than human development to people. However, recent centuries have witnessed more prosperity and growth than old days. Human beings have advanced in resolving the issues with variety of strategies. It marked a milestone from a lesser convenient strategy to a more effective approach to settle conflicts. It entails spectrum of options to avoid clashes and resolve them peacefully. On the contrary, modern prosperity for long-run peace and stability is gravely encountered by variety of challenges. All countries around the world can ensure human growth by a stable and persistent peace which will pave the way for a better tomorrow. In short, peace is difficult to maintain in today's world. However, it can be ensured by taking various strategies to encounter the challenges that impede maintaining peace.

To make a long story short, persistent peace can be ensured by taking timely actions against the obstacles which hinder peace and stability. It has become a rising concern for people nowadays. States around the world form various policies and interact with other states to ensure prosperity.

They adopt different techniques to achieve it. On the contrary, some factors impede the growth level of peace in the region. Peace can be achieved by integrating more means also to ensure its sustainability and long-term preservation. It can be stated with quot of Martin Luther that peace is not merely a distant goal that we seek, but a means by which we arrive at the goal.
