A Visit to Qualla Boundary

Indent the paragraph.

The author and his friend John visited a town called Qualla^B Boundary in Cherokee. The place is known for its beautiful scenery, traditional crafts that reflect the lifestyle of 18th century. They also explored the local market, which displayed rubber tomahawks, wax bonnets made of dyed turkey feathers, and cone shaped tents made of animal skin. They met a shopkeeper named George, who explained that Cherokee not only depend but also on "Bingo weekend", it is an entertainment festival which offers games such as the Super Jackpot and warrior game special. At the end, they visited a museum showcasing hand-woven oak baskets and stone carvings of wolves and ravens, reflecting Cherokee cosmology. After returning, they missed the place and began planning their next visit.
