Title:

A Journey to Cherokee.

The author was a travel enthusiast, who loved exploring new places. During his vacation he visited Cherokee suggested by his friend John. First, they went to Qualla, an ancient town surrounded by breathtaking scenery. They then visited souvenir shops, filled with exotic items, where they met George, who invited them for lunch. George told them how barely he managed his expenditures, but events like "Bingo weekend" earned them good money. Lastly, they visited a museum where artworks and symbols of Cherokee cosmology were portrayed. In the end, the author fondly remembered the trip and looked forward to explore new places.
