

Q1) How does the author characterize the concept of civil society?

Civil society is the community, where people interact and take part in conversation and express their views in on going situations. People usually take part when they are not at work, for instance people gathers at football match or at the park expressing their opinions for different situations. However, the common thing between those gathering is people arrives early and stay for some time after it ends. During that time, they discuss politics, world affairs, problems, and solutions. Civil society is the crucial pillar of the country, as it helps to ameliorate people thoughts which leads towards prosperity for the country.

Q2) Why does civil society strive towards better socialization driven by tolerance?

One of the crucial aspect of civil society is that it respects every person's opinion. Whenever, people gathers they express their own respective views, they shares what they think, not what other thinks. These kinds of debates leads to better outcome for the problems. Together, they forge robust opinions for the crisis and helps to reach for the better solution, through productive strategies. It is why giving every person chance to express his views, as it may facilitate to reach for an exceptional result.

Q3) What do you understand by the term 'social capital' used in this passage?

Social capital refers to that when people tolerate other people views, regardless of what they are or what they think of it. Moreover, it is a valuable skill for the multicultural nations. When people supports other people opinions, rather than opposing them it helps to build a healthy and effective society. In addition, respecting everyone opinions builds mutual bond between them, so whenever they face challenges they stood tandemly with each other for the betterment.

Q4) Why does a civil society assume the role of public stakeholder?

Civil society facilitates people to gather or interact to form a mutual bond between them. Whenever, individuals interact they share their problems and issues with others, as they hope others will help them to resolve their problems. In this way, civil society acts as a community that emphasizes on unity, rather than serving individual goals.

(Q5) What impact is feared by weakening state of civil society?

In today's contemporary world people rarely interact face-to-face. Social media is the key factor accountable for the virtual interactions. People today use apps for meetings worldwide, undermining the positives of face-to-face gatherings. Moreover, it's not just confined to interactions, but also people are losing interest in associations. Therefore, it should be a primary job for every individual to encourage for a robust civil society.

←————→
(CSS-2022)