

Good Governance is Key to poverty alleviation

Good Governance plays crucial role in poverty alleviation by providing equal opportunities for all, ensuring efficient delivery of services and reducing corruption. Good Governance ensures rule of law, participation, accountability and transparency, which play key role in reduction of poverty. Rule of law ensures that the accountability and transparency in the functioning of public administration which minimize the risk of corruption. Corruption is reduced when public administrators have the sense that they are answerable for their actions. This reduces the embezzlement of funds and nepotism and favouritism in department which are the major cause of corruption. Besides, good Governance also ensures the equal chances for opportunities, irrespective of caste, color, ethnicity, race and background. It ensures that everyone has equal opportunity to avail of any chance, and equity and equality prevails in society. Alongside, efficient delivery of services is also ensured by good governance, which help in eradicating poverty. If government is governed on the principle of rule of law and participation, everyone is involved in delivery of services which increase efficiency of delivery, which reduces poverty. Good governance ensures that everyone has equal resources and opportunities, delivery of service is efficient and meritocracy prevail in society, which help to ~~over~~ alleviate poverty as it provided equal chances for everyone of growth and upward mobility to everyone.
