

Global power shift and emerging world order.

Outline:

1. Introduction
2. How global power shift structure the emerging world order?
 - 2.1. Power will distribute among nations than single superpower.
(Case in point: Shanghai cooperation Organization SCO).
 - 2.2. Dedollarization and rise of currency competition.
(Case in point: Promotion of digital Yuan)
 - 2.3. Promote non-western approach to international law.
(Case in point: International Organization for Mediation (IOMed))
 - 2.4. Accelerate military superpower and security concerns.
(Case in point: 2 million personnel and $314 Billion budget of People's Liberation Army (PLA))
 - 2.5. Economic growth uprising with regional allies.
(Case in point: BRI and CPEC)
 - 2.6. Technological competition rivalry shape the world.
(Case in point: Deepseek-R1 and Huawei Hisilicon semiconductor)

2.7- Balance of power in middle east and south Asia.

(Case in point: BRICS organization)

3- The impact of emerging world order on global power shift.

3.1- Global institutions turn down into bilateral and regional organizations

(case in study:

3.2- Pressure to align with regional powers-

(case in point: Quadrilateral security dialogue (US led) on india)

3.3- Technological shift from military power.

(case in point: AI war between US-china)

3.4- Great power competition rivalries

(case in point: Russia-Ukraine war)

3.5- Complex global power system.

(case in point: NATO vs BRICS)

3.6- Warfare among superpowers for mutual interest.

(case in point: Iran-US war 2026)

3.7- Conflict-driven based on ideology

(case in point: South china sea rivalry)

4- Conclusion:

Introduction:

The world is no longer dominated by single power and history shows that no world order remains permanent. In contemporary world, the international system is transformed by economical development and emerging other geopolitical factors.

After cold war 1991, the unipolar global order represented by United Nation changed into multipolar order system driven by emergence of china as a superpower and their bounded relations with United America. Furthermore, power distributed among nations through currency shift, non-western approach to international law, accelerate military superpower, technological rivalry that shape the world and by global power shift and global institutions turn down into regional organizations. In addition, this also create impact of emerging world order on global power shift by conflicts driven based on ideologies, technological shift from military power and warfare among superpowers for mutual interest. Therefore, global power shifts the world from unipolar to multipolar world order system but the emerging world order is not only the reflection of global power shift but yet it is a driven force that reshapes and create impact on world powers, influencing them by increasing competition in international relations.